

Which is better Warlock Capacitor or Brag Eye

Does Warlock A do more damage than Warlock B?

Warlock B critically strikes an enemy with a shadowbolt and does only 2700 damage (10% less). Where this comes into play most is in itemization. Warlock A (the one specced into DS/Ruin) is going to get more value out of 1% spell crit than Warlock B will, due to the mere fact that their crits will hit for more.

Are warlocks better than mages?

Warlocks are typically less played, and easier to get groups on and gear overall (though a mage honestly shouldn't have any problems in that area either). Lock will be substantially better at solo farming and leveling. In PvP... I'd say warlocks are "S-Tier" while mages are merely "A-Tier"...

Which robes should be a warlock priority?

Robes of Volatile Powers should be warlock priority since mages can tailor Robe of the Archmage which is better. Mageblade and Choker of the Firelord should be equal priority between warlocks and mages. Good luck convincing your guilds of this, warlocks.

Which Warlock spec is best?

Currently, DS/Ruin is the universally accepted best warlock spec for dps in raids. It outperforms all other specs by a large margin. SM/Ruin is the second best, due to only losing 5% shadow damage (DS succubus sacrifice gives 15%, Shadow Mastery gives 10%), while gaining nightfall procs and some dot talents.

Should mages and warlocks have the same Prio?

Mageblade and Choker of the Firelord should be equal priority between warlocks and mages. Good luck convincing your guilds of this, warlocks. You are battling many years of prejudice :). edit: If you don't give warlocks prio for TOEP, they absolutely should have prio for Neltharion's Tear.

Should I play more than one warlock spec?

If you wanna play a warlock, you have multiple specs that play very differently because one is a pet-spec, one is a dot spec and one is a direct-dmg spec, so overall more enjoyable if you like to play multiple specs. That being said from a balance point of view usually one goes extremely ahead, while the others lack.

Elemental Capacitor is a perk introduced in Season of Dawn that rolls on a variety of weapons (even more weapons now in Season of The Worthy) ... This is certainly not a Quickdraw grade perk but is a decent option where better ...

Hello, I am looking for pure DPS class, preferably range and came up with these two. I like them both but still undecided which to go. Aesthetically I like Mage, but Warlock seems easier to pick up and more forgiving class. Not looking to top metters or to be meta, would like to stick with one for a long time. Would like to hear from people who play these classes about ...

It's too easy to out heal a warlock in group play unless your entire team is running warlock and you can just out sustain them. I do agree that wizard's spell count gets exhausted very quick in team fights now which is a problem warlock doesn't have. But imo wizard is ...

Neither are particularly impactful and especially Supportive Imbuements is simply outclassed in every conceivable way by pulse capacitor on its choice node. Oversurge paired with Earthsurge and the Earth Mote creates an extreme RNG combo that when playing Deeply Rooted Elements feels a bit like playing a game of chicken holding out to line them up, ...

Padlock is strictly better. Yes pure warlock has some slight advantages in higher spellslots and an additional but the problem with bg3 and dnd is that it's pretty bad to try to min/Max casting and melee at the same time because there isn't a lot of gear that benefits both. You're better off going Padlock or Sorlock depending on what you prefer.

IMO Warlock is a great class to dip into for 2-5 levels then have another class be your "main" class. And in terms of multiclassing Warlock is by far a better dip than cleric in most cases. Again though, it depends. But I sure had fun having 3rd level spells come back on a short rest because I NEEDED those counterspells that campaign.

Including Super. This is considerably more effective than Eye. Verity's. While Eye of Another World works for every ability except Super, this only works on Grenades, but it GREATLY increases the recharge rate. But Eye works well in GMs because you aren't getting a ton of weapon kills quickly anyways.

An exception can be made specifically for chambered and extended barrel however, but only when paired with elemental capacitor and a stasis subclass. If you cannot manage to get a roll you like with arrowhead, a counterbalance mod will suffice. ... BXR for melee builds and that true halo feel, and eye of the storm for the clutch accuracy ...

I want to make an alt I was thinking warlock or druid. This would be for raiding and some mythic plus too. Which is more fun in your opinion? which is a better choice overall?

It's actually quite good for warlocks seeding above AOE cap since it bypasses the AOE cap with added flat damage. When over AOE cap, it adds about 2.5-3x the amount of DPS than the 40 ...

Fey warlock thematically makes a lot of sense, since Beguiling Presence is basically mini-dragon fear if re-flavoured. Also getting Faerie Fire on Sorlock is actually pretty good, so make sure to hold onto that fey archetype and get the spell. I think Warlock 2/Sorcerer 6 is your best bet if you want to just be powerful.

This is a good way to look at it. Warlock will probably be more fulfilling if you like the plate spinning gameplay with nuanced decision making. But mages will blast especially when fire comes online and that has its own kind of satisfaction too
